

Government honors life and legacy of Alicia Godett

Last Sunday, on the very date of her birth, the community of San Nicolas gathered to celebrate a special and historic moment. Family and friends witnessed the inauguration of the J. Van Stolbergstraat to the Alicia Godettstraat. The Prime Minister, who was present for the important occasion remarked... “It gives much satisfaction to realize that you can give something back for the dedication that Alicia gave to the community.”

The occasion was a rather emotional one, as many of those who knew Alicia Godett well, expressed words of personal joy as they described the joyful and positive person that Alicia was and as they recounted various anecdotes which reflected her character. The Prime Minister indicated that they were dedicating a street to a woman who has left a lot of emotions in our hearts and who guided many children in the barrio to lead productive lives.

The Prime Minister expressed the fact that dedicating this street to one of our citizens is our way of bestowing honor and respect for what Alicia did for the community. To Alicia's daughter, Nicole, the Prime Minister remarked that she must always remember that she had the best mother anyone could have had.

Alicia will be remembered as a school teacher, a neighbor, a politician, or the mother of all the children in the barrio.

The name board bearing her name will remain for generations for all to know and later down the years to enquire as to who Alicia Godett was for all of San Nicolas and Aruba.
